

BRONTE BEAT - Volume 34 - Issue 8

October 24, 2024

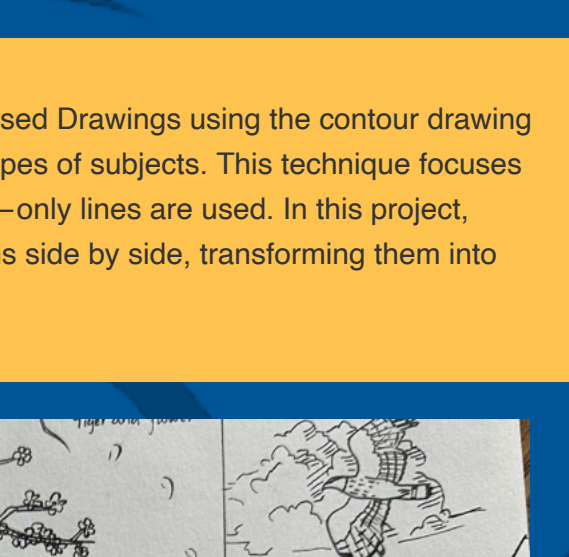

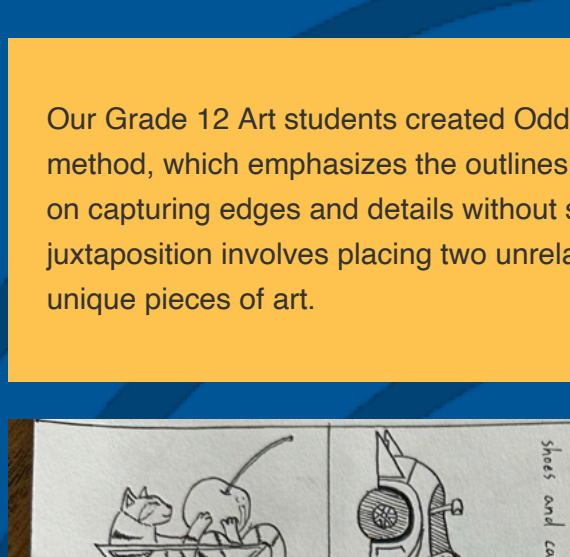

The countdown to our Halloween Dance is finally over!

Come join us tonight in the gym at 7:30 p.m. for a night full of spooky games, delicious treats, picture-perfect moments, and a "Best Costume" contest. Don't miss out on winning an amazing prize for the most FANG-tastic costume!

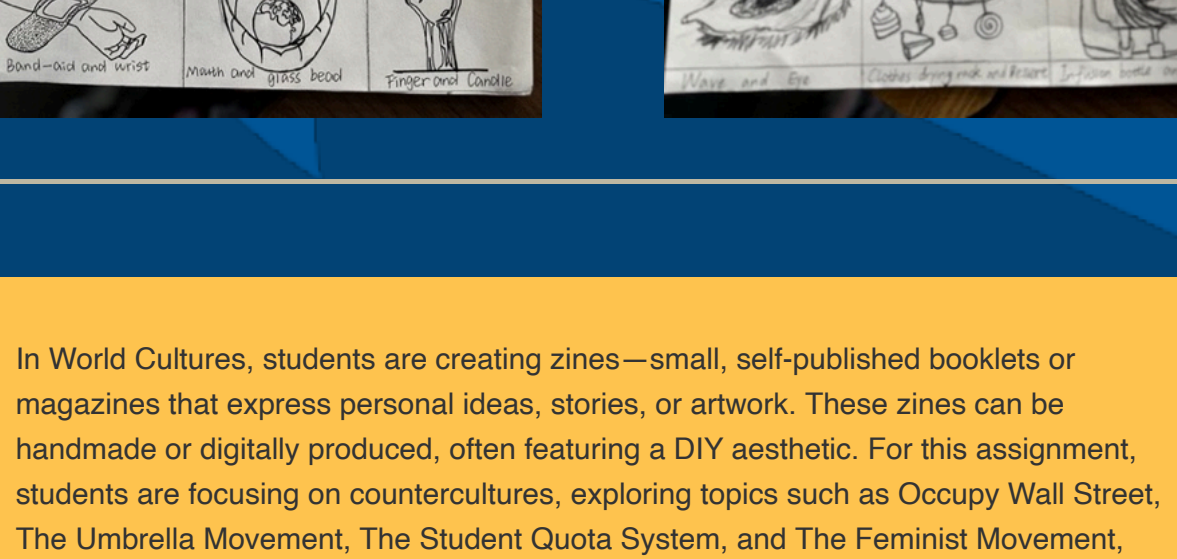

WHAT'S HAPPENING ON CAMPUS

Our students have embraced the changing weather by enjoying delicious comfort food, including fresh hot dogs with their choice of condiments, a variety of sushi, and a competitive game of Bingo.

ACADEMIC HIGHLIGHTS

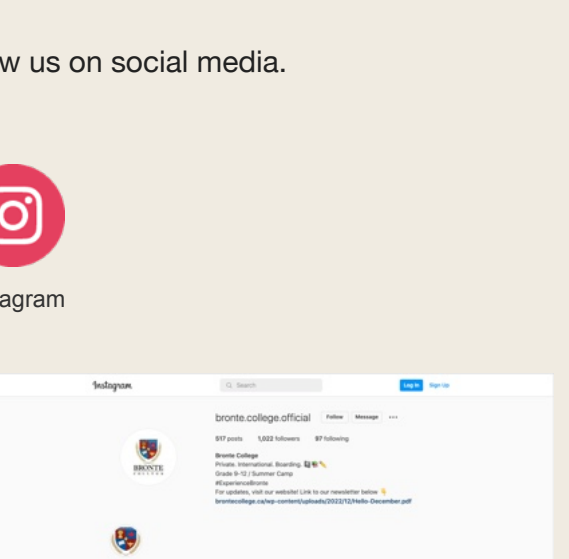

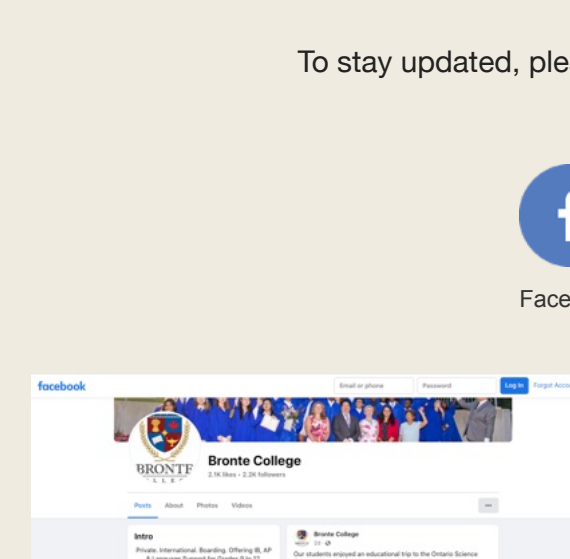

Two representatives from the University of Waterloo, Professor Ting Tsui, Director of Nanotechnology Engineering, and Nicola Kelly, Communications and Outreach Officer for Chemical Engineering and Nanotechnology Engineering, delivered a presentation to clarify the scope of Nanotechnology Engineering and Chemical Engineering. They discussed the various advantages of pursuing degrees in these fields, addressing the common uncertainty about what these disciplines entail and highlighting the exciting career opportunities available to graduates. Professor Tsui even showcased an authentic silicon substrate valued at nearly $0.3 million, providing students with a unique hands-on experience.

Our Grade 12 Art students created Odd Juxtaposition Drawings using the contour drawing method, which emphasizes the outlines and shapes of subjects. This technique focuses on capturing edges and details without shading—only lines are used. In this project, juxtaposition involves placing two unrelated items side by side, transforming them into unique pieces of art.

In World Cultures, students are creating zines—small, self-published booklets or magazines that express personal ideas, stories, or artwork. These zines can be handmade or digitally produced, often featuring a DIY aesthetic. For this assignment, students are focusing on countercultures, exploring topics such as Occupy Wall Street, The Umbrella Movement, The Student Quota System, and The Feminist Movement, among others.
